Local Money-Saving Tips for Norway

Norway isn't cheap, but you can travel like a local

Use public transport, buy food in the right places, skip unnecessary taxis.

Choose nature-based experiences.

Learn the small systems Norwegians use to save money every day.

Shop where locals shop

Best prices

Kiwi, Rema 1000, Coop Extra

Budget brands: First Price, Eldorado, R, Xtra.

Cost more

Meny, Coop Mega and Joker

Avoid gas-station snacks and imported specialty products.

Too Good To Go

Rescue discounted bakery and shop surplus.

Make every meal count

Cook breakfast yourself

Even from a small kitchen corner.

Pack a matpakke

Bread, cheese, fruit, thermos coffee.

Make lunch your main restaurant meal

Lunch menus cost less than dinner.

Buy bread in supermarkets

Use bakeries strategically.

Fix the drink budget leaks

Tap water

Safe and excellent.

Carry a reusable bottle.

Return bottles and cans

Get pant, the deposit refund.

Alcohol is heavily taxed

Supermarkets sell beer; Vinmonopolet sells wine and spirits.

Use convenience-store coffee deals

Skip cafes.

Plan transport with Entur and regional apps

- Entur combines buses, trains, ferries, trams, metro and boats
- Install Ruter, Skyss, AtB, Reis Nordland or Svipper for each region
- Buy tickets in advance via apps; book long-distance trains early
- Check day passes when you take several trips

Skip taxis, and price the car honestly

- Skip taxis. Walk or use buses, trams, metro and trains.
- In Oslo, compare regular trains with airport express options.
- No car for city-only trips. When renting, add tolls, ferries, parking and fuel.
- Use regular ferries as scenic transport instead of sightseeing cruises.
- Compare long-distance buses with trains; travel in shoulder season.

Stay smart: kitchen, location, timing

Location

Stay one stop outside famous areas. Compare cabins, hostels, guesthouses and apartments.

Kitchen

Weigh breakfast-included rates against total daily food cost. Campsites offer cabins, shared kitchens and laundry.

Timing

Book refundable early, then re-check prices. Secure peak-season nights for Lofoten and the fjords.

The best value is free nature

- Build around free viewpoints, fjords, trails, waterfalls and scenic roads.
- Learn allemannsretten (right to roam); check local wild-camping rules.
- Bring hiking gear from home. Outdoor gear is expensive in Norway.
- Pick one paid highlight, surrounded by free days.
- Ask visitor centres for free advice; respect parking rules at popular hikes.

City cards only pay off with a plan

1 Compare Oslo Pass or Bergen Card cost

Against your actual itinerary. Check family and child pricing on official pages.

2 Group paid museums

On the same day to raise card value.

Mix in free stops

Mix in free museums, churches, harbour walks and viewpoints.
